

A MAJOR LEAGUE DIAGNOSIS CALLED FOR MAJOR LEAGUE SURGEONS.

My brain tumor was growing and had to be removed. I started preparing myself for a massive operation — a craniotomy. Then Mom heard an ad on the radio about the neurosurgery team at Bronson. Finding Dr. Fabi, my neurosurgeon, and Dr. Szeles, my ear nose and throat surgeon, changed everything. They're experts at a new, minimally invasive procedure called the Endoscopic Endonasal Approach (EEA). Incredibly, they were able to remove the tumor through my nose. There was far less risk. And the recovery time was weeks instead of months. If not for Bronson Positivity, I'd have missed this baseball season for sure — and maybe a whole lot more.